Not illustrated. 2003* Excerpt: ...common communications, training and associated management infrastructure. This system was developed through the FIRESCOPE program, in direct response to public pressure for a more efficient fire response after a similar fire siege in 1970. The ICS system answers the public and political demand for having someone in charge during a disaster. The ICS allows for expansion as the complexity of an incident grows. Large, complex incidents managed under the ICS system require a large cadre of trained professionals. Federal agencies and CDF have developed incident teams that are dispatched to an incident as a single unit. The National system also includes teams called Area Command Teams that are used to supervise multiple incidents on behalf of the Agency Administrators. Complexities that existed for this siege Numerous large fires burning concurrently. Large fires exceeding span of control guidelines. Fires involved multiple jurisdictions resulting in overlapping or concurrent responsibilities. Great deal of involvement by media and elected officials. Differences in agency policy. Fires that burned in towns and wilderness areas simultaneously. There were multiple large fires burning close to each other competing for the same scarce resources. Several organizational issues surfaced during the rapid development of this siege. Several of the fires grew so large that the incident commanders were forced to exceed span-of-control guidelines until organizations could be adjusted. Incident commanders were having difficulty providing logistical support over long distances. Team leaders attempting to fill assignments found that trained personnel were scarce. Strategic response Larger incidents were split into two incidents, sometimes along jurisdictional boundaries. This h...
